We have chosen the Open Source license BSD. There are many advantages by using the BSD-license, we can put in other BSD-code in our app, we can use the free version of Git-hub and we can publish the app to Google Play when it is finished (and charge one USD for it). In the future we also have the ability to "close" the project and not distribute the source code.

We have also added a clause to the license:
The group behind this application does not take any responsibility for any of your actions during or after use of the "My Bar"-application.
The group takes no responsibility for possible errors in the information in the app. If the user suspects any errors in the recipes, please contact the group and give them further information about the error.
